

Len Audaer (1995-2004)

After leaving BGS in 2004 I spent time living in Prague before attending Royal Holloway, University of London where I read Politics & International Relations. I was fortunate enough to be chosen for the university's study abroad place at Boston College where I spent my second year majoring in Political Science and English. While at BC, I was introduced to the two loves of my life; the Boston Red Sox baseball team, and my New Yorker fiancée Rachel.

After the wrench of leaving Boston, I returned to Royal Holloway where I completed my degree despite making innumerable trips to my adopted home. After graduating, I took a job as an accounts manager for a public relations consultancy in Bloomsbury where my primary client was the UK's largest private healthcare provider, for whom I acted as a spokesman.

My inevitable return to the US came after being accepted to study for a combined Juris Doctor and Masters in International Relations at Syracuse University's College of Law and Maxwell School, in upstate New York. After living in Washington, D.C. for a time, I moved to Syracuse where I managed to survive the dreaded "1L", or first year.

Having been selected by the Maxwell School's Institute for National Security and Counter-Terrorism, I will spend summer 2010 in Herzliya and the West Bank, Israel, studying for a qualification in counter-terrorism. I also intend to travel around Israel, Jordan and Lebanon.

During the 2010-11 academic year I will act as the College of Law's representative to the American Bar Association and vote in its name at the annual conference in San Francisco. I will also narrow my studies, primarily to the areas of Wills & Trusts and National Security Law. I currently live both in Syracuse and on Long Island, New York.

Len Audaer
Juris Doctor Candidate, Class of 2012
Syracuse University College of Law
American Bar Association Representative 2010-11
President, Parliamentary Debate Society
Negotiation Director, Alternative Dispute Resolution Club
(617) 230-1280